Dear Brewster:

We heard that WAIS, Inc., recently had an announcement of new products. We hope and trust that the announcement went well, and that things are going well generally with your company.

At this point, it would be a good idea to tie up the loose ends from last summer. Part of the agreement between yourself, on behalf of what became WAIS, Inc., and Thinking Machines was that Thinking Machines would get compensation for licensing the technology, whose development was paid for by Thinking Machines, to you, possibly through an equity participation in your new company. We think that we need to come to a resolution on that issue in the near future.

We look forward to your early reply.

Very truly yours,

Harvey Weiss

I called Dick Clayton of TMC and suggested that we split any money we get for selling the upgraded WAIS station.

Dick was very busy, but took time to understand where we were and what I was saying. He was positive about the whole thing in general, but wanted to deal with it after the end of the year (end of fiscal year as well).

I would say this was a good chat and we are on good footing. I think what I am offering is fair and the right thing.

We'll see. I want to have this sewn up before the end of January.
